GIRL HAS "CELLO VOICE"

MISS ADELAIDE NOWAK,
In "The Harvest Moon."

MISS ADELAIDE NOWAK has gained the nickname, "The Girl With the Cello Voice."

Miss Nowak's voice has not the peculiar richness of Ethel Barrymore's, nor the rippling, cooling melody of Marie Dorso's. It does not take skyward leaps, like Billie Burke's, nor begin a sentence with a laugh and end it with a sob, like Maude Adams. It is distinctively the voice of Adelaide Nowak, and, by a wise choice, the voice of the Dora Fullerton, of "The Harvest Moon."

Miss Nowak smiled when an interviewer asked how she developed her unusually beautiful voice.

"Why, there's nothing extraordinary about my voice," she said. "I believe it has always had a rather pleasant quality, which I inherited, no doubt, like Dora, and throat specialists have told me that my throat is especially well formed for vocal power. I am inclined to think that a beautiful voice is a gift to be thankful for, not an achievement to boast of."

From present indications, James Forbes' new comedy, "The Commuters," will be produced by Henry B. Harris on Easter Monday, Mr. Forbes having progressed so far on his play that Mr. Harris, who is producing it, is making an announcement. The premiere will take place outside of New York. It is scheduled for New York hearing early next September.

Anna Brunner, who will sing the role of Natalia in "The Merry Widow," at the National Theatre, will be remembered for her fine impersonation of the prima donna role in "The Gay Hussar," which Henry W. Savage has temporarily withdrawn.

MILTON and SARGENT ABORN have obtained the rights from Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom for the production of Fritz Scheff's production, "Mlle Modiste," and have purchased the entire production of scenery and costumes. A prominent prima donna is being negotiated with for the title role, and the production will be sent on tour the coming season.

Richard Carle is announced at the Columbia Theater for the week beginning Monday, February 14. He will be seen as Leander Lamb, the henpecked hero of his musical comedy, "Mary's Lamb," a part he has been playing for more than two seasons.

Since the piece was presented at the National Theater, during Easter week two years ago, Mr. Carle has made many changes in the lines, jokes, songs, and situations, so that the play is now said to be more amusing than ever.

Nat M. Wille will be one of the leaders of this year's Lamb's Annual Gamble.

In a repertoire of standard plays, Thomas E. Shea comes to the Academy of Music, next Monday, to produce "The Belles" and "Jekyll and Hyde" he will this season offer a new piece, entitled "The Counsel for the Defense."

Following the engagement of Henry Miller at the Savoy Theater, New York, on Monday, January 24, Henry B. Harris will present Frank Keenan's play, "The Heights," supported by Willette Kershaw, Frank Miller, Harry Benning, Mrs. Charles C. Craig, and Hilda Keenan.

A curious subplot has been evolved by Augustus Thomas in his latest success, "The Harvest Moon," which comes here direct from a four months' run at Philadelphia and New York. In the third act of the play, the author shows in a startling way the effect of color upon superstitious people, who are governed by moods and emotions. Mr. Thomas has worked upon a plausible fact in introducing this incidental scene as scientists have proven that color is an important factor in controlling the feelings of many persons at crucial moments.

Bertha Kalich has been engaged as a member of the New Theater Company and will make her first appearance February 14, in "The Witch," a drama adapted by Prof. Hermann Hagedorn, of Harvard University, from the Norwegian of H. W. Jensen.
